

Dr. Polite is an Associate Professor of Medicine; Deputy Section Chief for Clinical Operations and Executive Medical Director for Cancer Accountable Care at the University of Chicago where he is overseeing the negotiations and implementation of several alternative payment models for the cancer center. He currently sits on the board of the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO), is Past-Chair of the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO) Health Disparities Committee and a two-time chair of the ASCO Government Relations Committee. He is a graduate of ASCO's Leadership Development Program, a recipient of an ASCO Career Development Award, and was named a Fellow of the Society in 2018. He is a past Associate Editor of the Journal of Oncology Practice. Dr. Polite is an active practicing GI oncologist where he specializes in the treatment of patients with Colorectal and anal cancer. He received a distinguished clinician award from the Biologic Science Division faculty and distinguished teaching award from the oncology fellows. He is actively involved at the Federal and local level in developing alternative payment models for cancer care. His primary research focus is in cancer health disparities with a particular focus on the psychosocial and spiritual aspects of health disparities. Dr. Polite earned his Bachelor and Master's degree in Public Policy Studies from the University of Chicago, and went on to spend 4 years working on Health Care and Medicare reform policy in Washington DC with the Department of Health and Human Services and with the Office of Senator Bill Bradley. He received his MD from Indiana University and then did his training in Internal Medicine and Medical oncology at the University of Chicago.