Job Summary

The Psychologist position is an integral part of the practice team with the Psycho-oncology service. The primary responsibility of this position is to provide psychological assessment, consultation and intervention services to cancer patients and their families. As this position also provides consultation on individual patient mental health issues to the patient's providers and health care team, the work environment for this position involves interaction with many other practitioners within the Cancer Center. Ways to improve communication and service to patients are part of each person's job in the Cancer Center. Participation in the Continuous Quality Improvement process and strict adherence to HIPAA policies and procedures are expected.

The UCSF Helen Diller Family Comprehensive Cancer Center is an accredited National Cancer Institute Comprehensive Cancer Center. The NCI-Designation recognizes the scientific leadership, resources, and the depth and breadth of the research in basic, clinical and population science. As a Comprehensive Cancer Center, we demonstrate the added depth and breadth of research as well as substantial transdisciplinary research that bridges these scientific areas. The clinical services encompass adult and pediatric tumors across three campuses as well as regional satellite locations. The clinical cancer program is one of the largest clinical services at UCSF Medical Center and encompasses roughly 230 non-physician FTEs, 90+ cost center, and dozens of grant and philanthropic funding sources. At the UCSF Helen Diller Family Comprehensive Cancer Center we are truly pioneering care and leaders in all areas of cancer clinical care and research. We are routinely voted a top 10 program by U.S. News and World Report.
